This work, which combines literature with theology, has always sustained high reputation for learning and ability—nearly all the more eminent Unitarians of the day having been at different times numbered among its contributors. Papers and esasys which have since been collected into distinct volumes, with the names of distinguished scholars and divines, and men of a noble public spirit, as their authors, first appeared in these for readers. The list of the writers in this series of works for the last half-century, it is believed, would subtrace the names of the majority of those who have been distinguished as literary men or scholars in New England, and even over a wider region, during the interval of time.

The North American Review has now attained its 170th number, having been published without intermission for more than forty years. It is far the oldest American periodical devoted to general literature and science, and its reputation has been teadily maintained, both in this country and in Europe, as the leading journal of the United States within its appropriate department.

leading journal of the United States within its appropriate department.

The New York Enquirer says:

"The North American Review is associated with the earliest promise of American literature. Hardly a name now considerable in our country for letters, but gained its earliest laster as a contributor to its pages. It nursed into life the abilities of some, and the reputation of others. Sparks, Everett, Ticknor, Prescott, Bancroft, made their maden efforts in its service, and found their first public in its patrons. Its editors alone form an illustrious line of literary worthies, connecting the earliest with the most recent of American reputations.

"If any review in America has had a national character and infinence, it is this. Indeed, its contributors and subscribers have represented and connected the remotest parts of the country, from Detroit to New-Orleans, from St. Louis to Boston. The South has farnished many spiendid essays for its pages, while its prestige in the cultivated circles there long suppassed that of all other journals. It has been among reviews what The Washington Intelligencer has been among reviews what The CROSBY, NICHOLS & Co. Publishers, No. 111 Washington-et., Boston.

MYSTERIES of the POST-OFFICE. TEN YEARS AMONG THE MAIL-BAGS;

TEN YEARS AMONG THE MAIL BAGS;

NOTES FROM THE DIARY OF A SPECIAL AGENT OF THE POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

By J. HOL. BROOK.

By J. HOL. BROOK.

Beautifully illustrated with 16 steel Portraits by Ritchie, and 12 Wood Engravings, from designs chiefly by Darley.

This work—undertaken with the sanction of the chief officers of the Post-Office Department by a gentleman who has long been and is still one of the Special Agents of that Departmentists the first book of the kind ever issued calculated to give the public as insight into the practical operations of the Post-Office Establishment, and the almost certain means which still and experience have furnished for the detection and punishment of offenders against the laws enacted for the security of the mails and the invisiability of private correspondence.

Never has a volume been officed to the public under a more hearty and universal commendation of that collightened and powerful censor, the Press. Brief extracts from several of these flattering notices are annexed:

"The book will prove one of the most entertaining of the season; and in liveliness, interest, and general truth to nature, will form a pleasant addition to our stock of popular light literature."

N. Y. Evening Post.

"We are bound to concede to Mr. Holbrook's narrative of his post-Office experience the merit of being an exceedingly interesting and suggestive book."

N. Y. Evening Post.

"The 'cutest and most entertaining book we have recently seen. Some of Mr. Holbrook's true, unvanished recitals heat all that one finds in Reynolds's monstrosities; and any one wincreads them will realize at once that romance still lives and thrives amid our modern life."

This work commends itself, by the nature of its subject, to every person who can read a book or write a letter.

"The work commends itself, by the nature of its subject, to every person who can read a book or write a letter."

"This book is indeed a novelty, exceedingly entertaining, and opening a new source of amusement." [Hart Daily Courant. "There is substance enough in the incidents, plots and character conteined in his sketches to fill a dozen novels."

"No person who has ever allowed himself to harbor for a moment the idea of opening another person's letter can read the book without shuddering at the frightful precipice on which he has stood."

"It would be impossible, in the limits of an article like this, to speak of particular articles which commend this Encyclopadia to the attention of the reading public. It is full of matter, which no one, who desires to be well informed, can find elsewhere in so compact and desirable a form. The student of history will find it a valuable aid in his researches: the editor will have constant use for it for purposes of reference and extract; the philologist can derive from it many valuable suggestions and facts; in chort, it is a work for every one, and no library is complete without it."
